

All Access: A photographer's perspective on Red Teaming

by Mansoor Ahmad

- Photographer-turned-pen tester
- 5 years as a press photographer, 2 seasons as team photographer
- Big fan of social engineering and Burp Suite

The short and sweet

- The WHO: Media, ops staff and security folks (and bad guys)
- The WHAT: Abusing the First Amendment to get physical, network and device-level access
- The WHERE: Your favorite sporting or music venue
- The WHY: Get lucky, and you can get secrets about your favorite team or drama about your favorite band

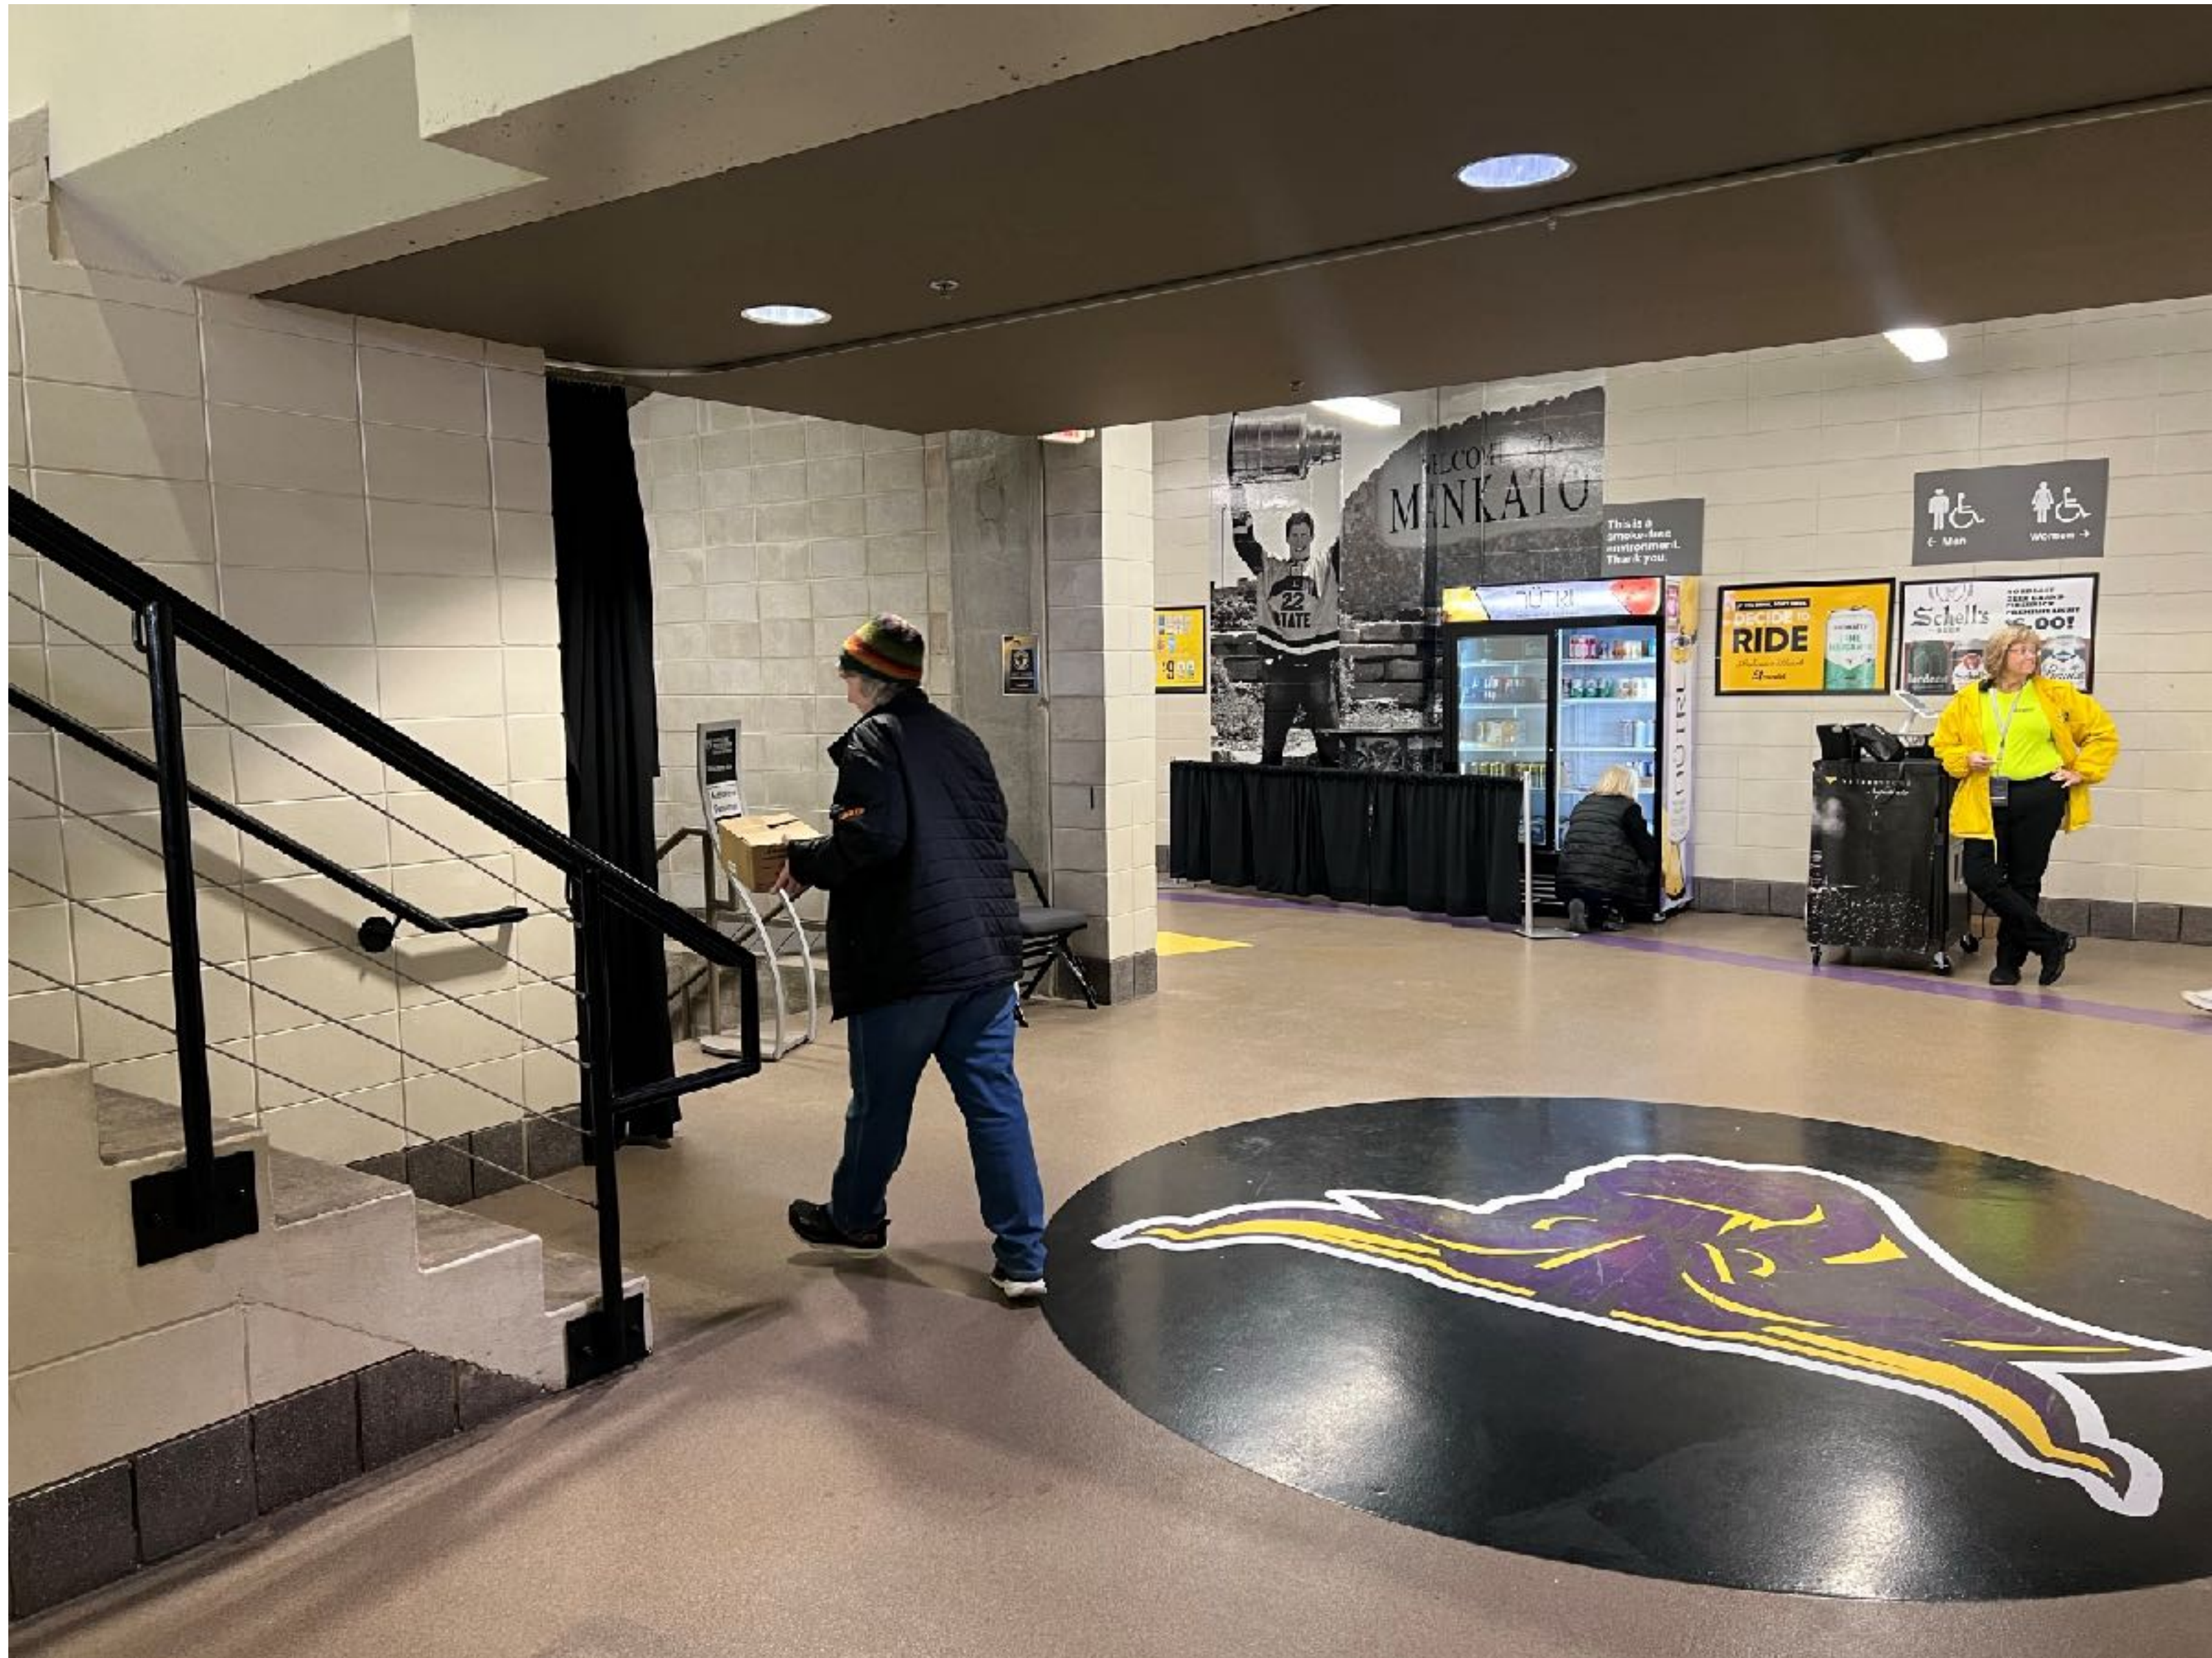

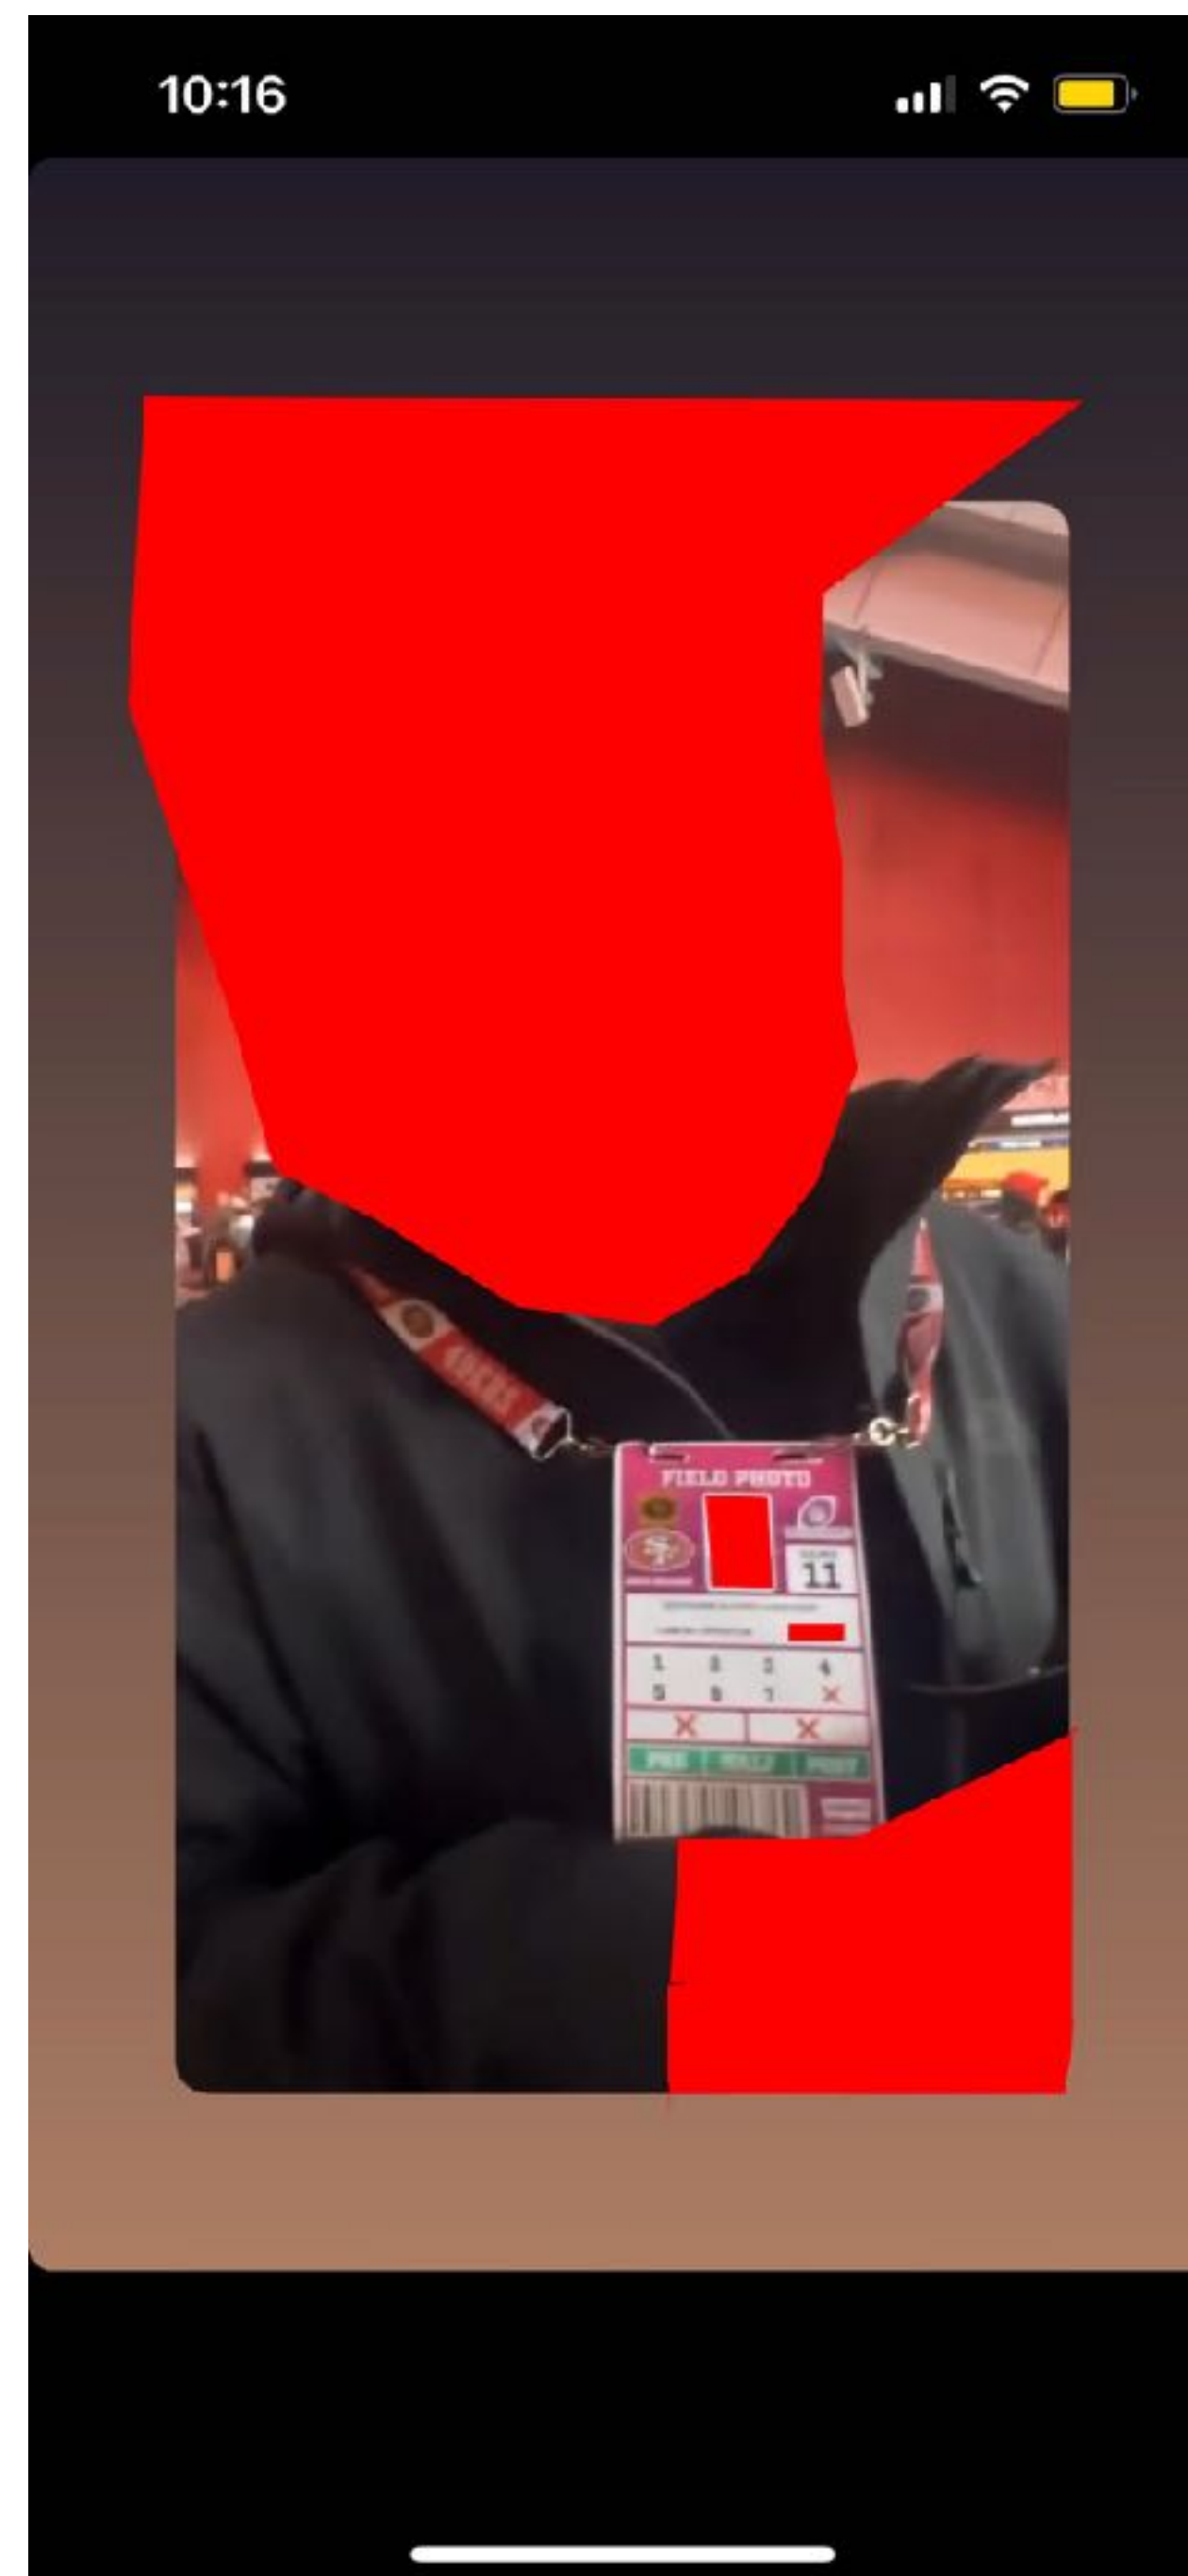

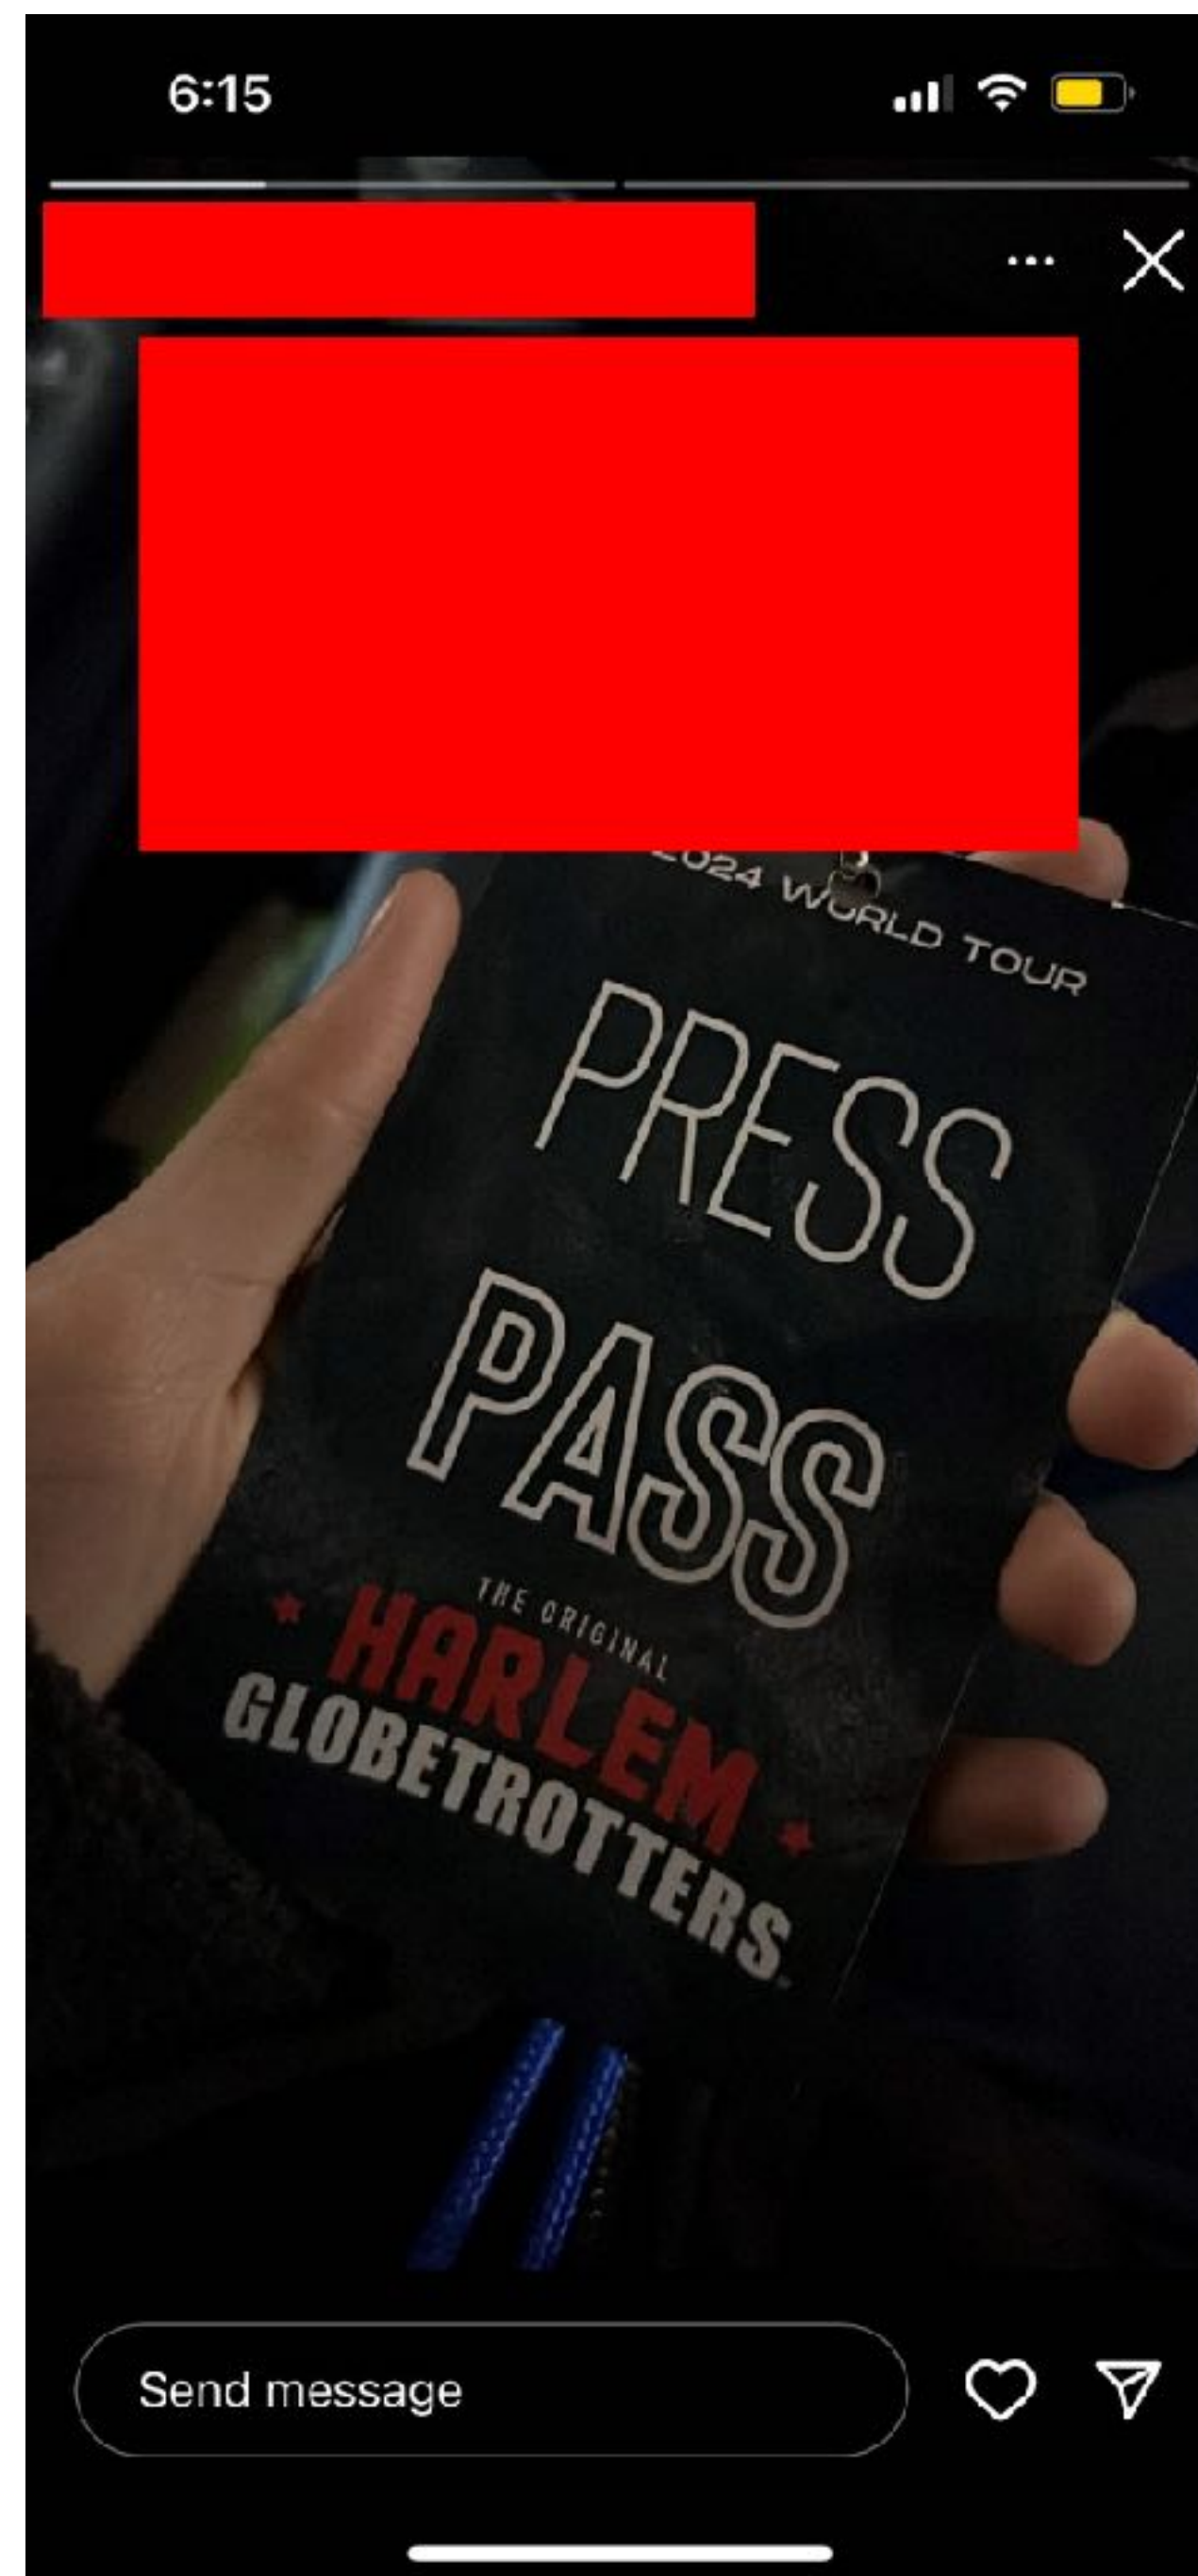

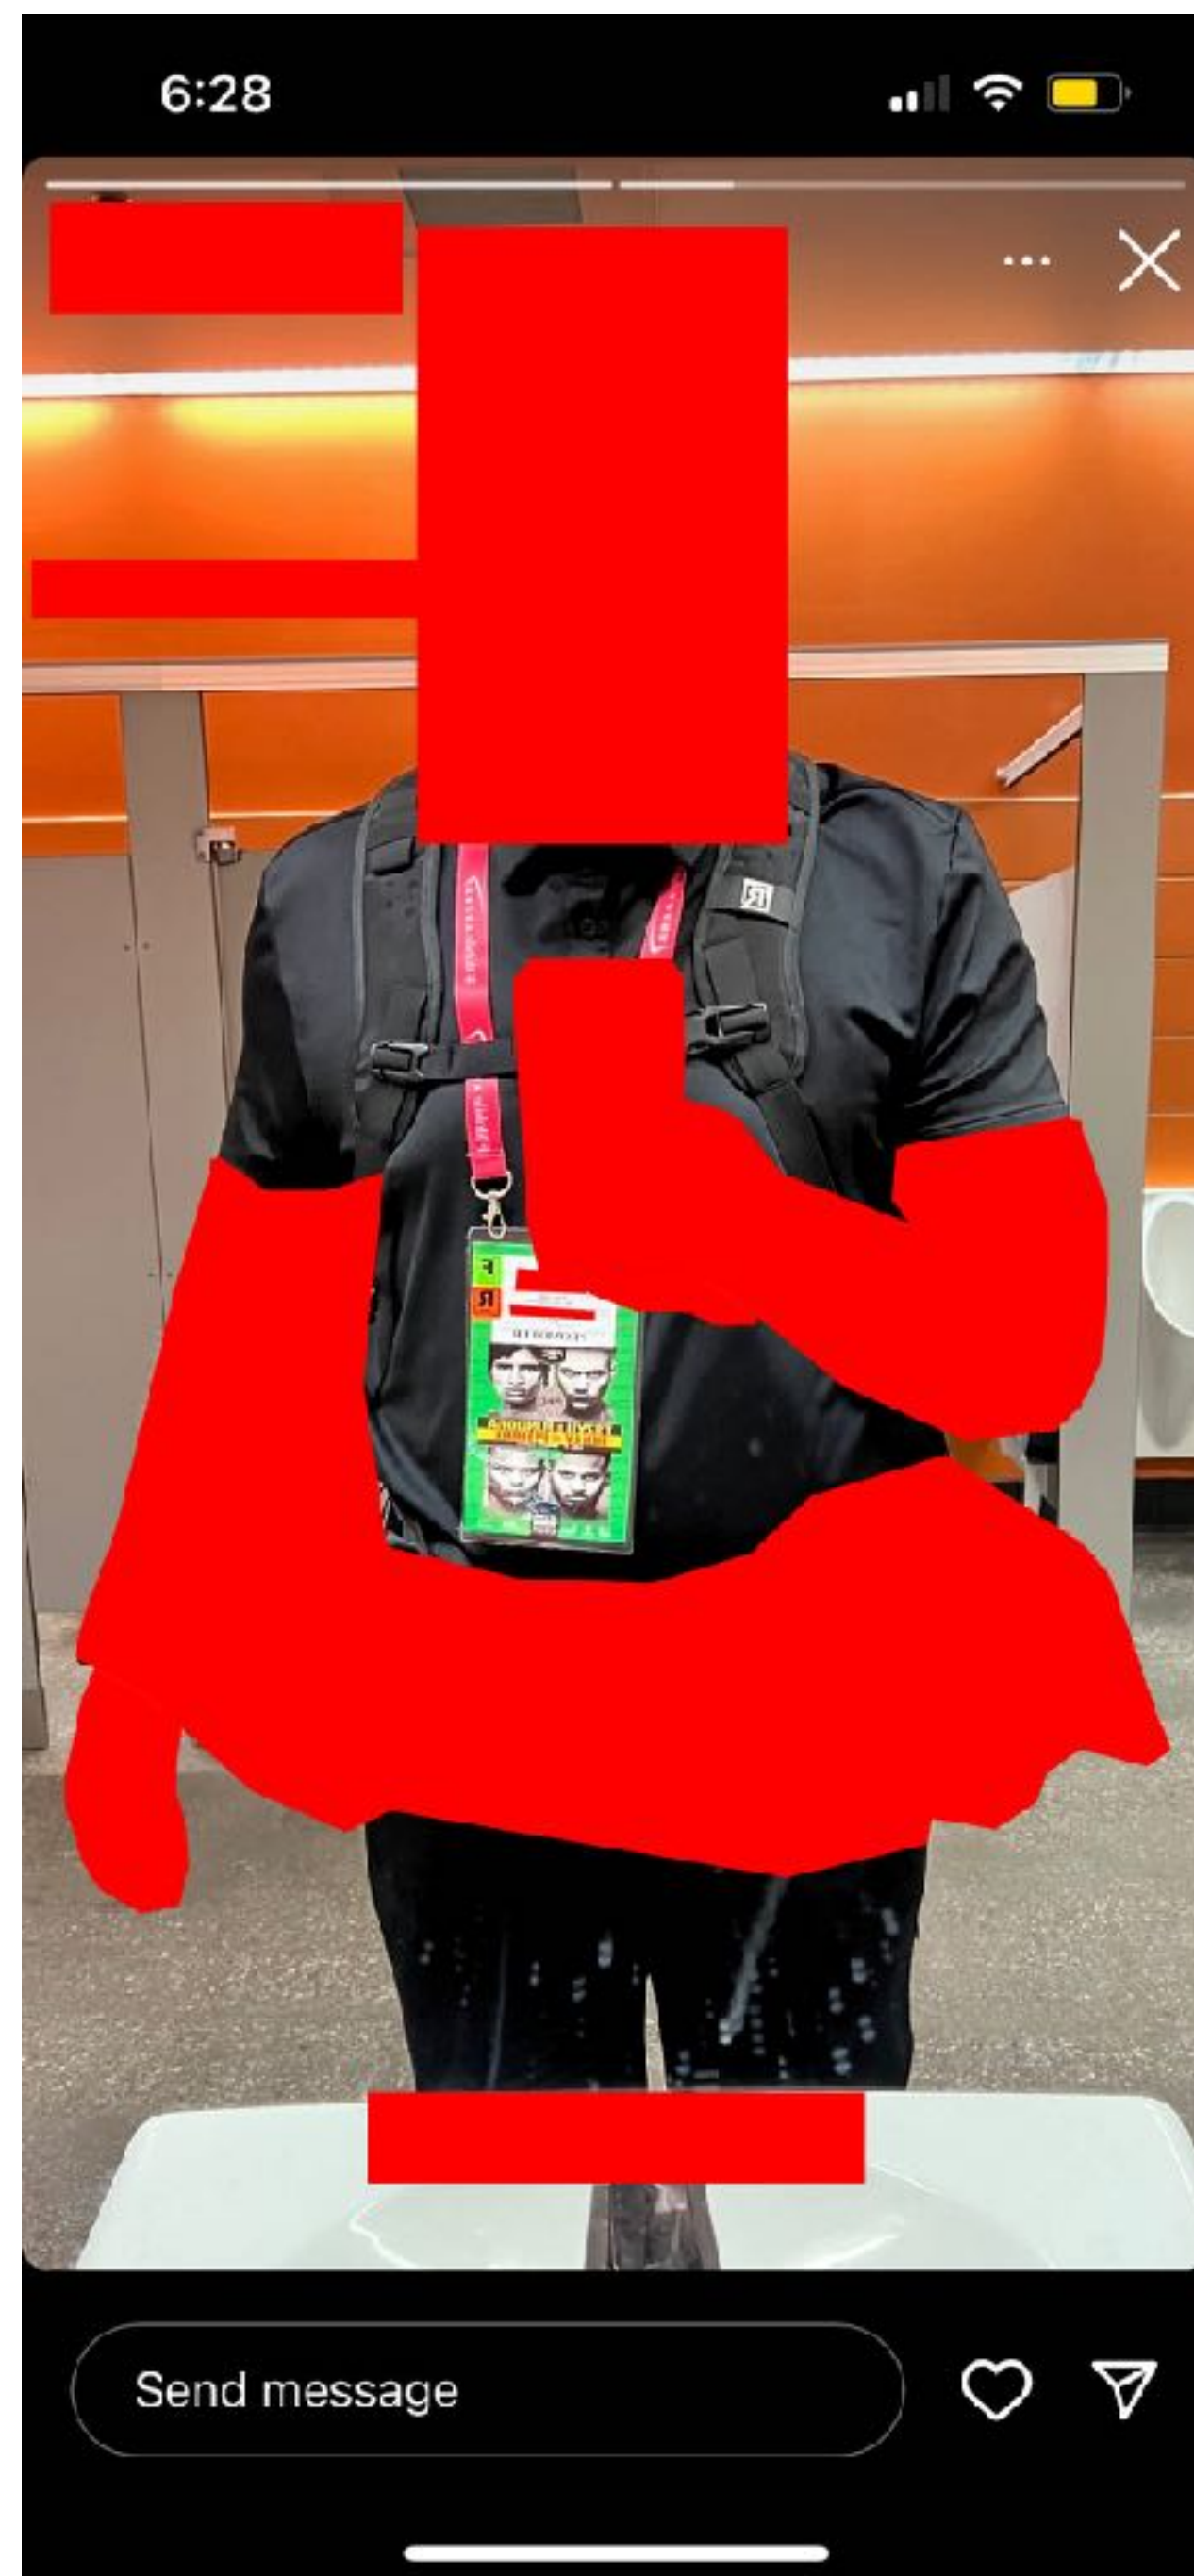

Part 1: Getting in

- Creds through social media
- The media credential, or press pass, process

OR...

The media credential, or press pass, process

- OSINT to find publicist/managers (Press releases, Facebook page, IMDB, etc.)
- Identify target outlet/mark
- Why Reporter/smaller outlets are a good example
- Typosquatting, cloning sites and email accounts

What to do when you have access?

- Play by the book, until you get your moment and deploy your dropbox (prior experience/research helps)
- The less interaction the better: act like you've been there or you're supposed to be there (Bonus tip: being nice always helps :)
- Verify you have good connection. If so, let the games begin!
- Bonus – priv esc: Switch roles (Re: Jayson Street MS badge)

If all goes well...

- Maybe a bonus point: building the relationship with the publicists (= establishing persistence) to get more shows. But don't worry, you don't have to work that hard...

Concert Review: Taylor Swift's Eras Tour at U.S. Bank Stadium, Minneapolis

On a balmy summer evening in Minneapolis, U.S. Bank Stadium was transformed into a pulsating nexus of music and magic as Taylor Swift took the stage for her highly anticipated Eras Tour. The atmosphere was electric, buzzing with anticipation from a diverse crowd spanning generations, all eager to witness Swift's evolution through her music.

As the lights dimmed and the crowd erupted into deafening cheers, Swift appeared onstage, a vision in sequins and charisma. She opened with "Fearless," instantly captivating the audience with her powerful vocals and infectious energy. The stage design was a spectacle in itself, with elaborate sets and dazzling visual effects that complemented each song's narrative.

Swift seamlessly transitioned between hits from different eras of her career, showcasing her versatility

Part 2: Attacking networks and pivoting

- Exploiting the traveling folks
 - a. Dropbox equipped with ways to connect to multiple networks
 - b. LOTS of custom scripts to...
 - c. Start detecting new APs when traveling party starts prep
 - d. Try to get creds (deauth attacks, social engineering through captive portals)
 - e. Connect and pivot to the 'traveling network' using creds. Try to establish persistence/exploit right away (depending on scenario)

Yikes! So what should we do?

- Photogs: don't post your credentials online pls
- Security companies: work on developing and adding service offerings tailored to publicists/management companies
- Publicists/management companies: talk to security companies and offer tailored training

What's next on this project?

- Working on a comprehensive demo of the whole attack chain
- Developing tooling/workflow to get it to do more reliable Wi-Fi attacks
- Talk to smarter people and see if they have any ideas
